Good law-making: 9(j)

The importance of carefully evaluating—

- the issue concerned; and
- the effectiveness of any relevant existing legislation and common law; and
- whether the public interest requires that the issue be addressed; and
- any options (including non-legislative options) that are reasonably available for addressing the issue; and
- who is likely to benefit, and who is likely to suffer a detriment, from the legislation

Inconsistency identified? NO

Summary of agency analysis

Medicines may not be distributed in New Zealand without the Minister's consent. Short of repealing the Medicines Act, there are no options to address this issue except secondary legislation. Within that context, the decision to approve these medicines is based on a detailed assessment of the risks and benefits of the medicine. This assessment includes considering potential benefit to the public, and whether any risks can be managed through conditions on the consent to distribute.

Good law-making: 9(k)

The importance of the responsible agency identifying and developing effective arrangements for implementing the legislation

Liberties: 9(b)

Legislation should not unduly diminish a person's liberty, personal security, freedom of choice or action, or rights to own, use, and dispose of property, except as is necessary to provide for, or protect, any such liberty, freedom, or right of another person

Inconsistency identified? NO

Summary of agency analysis

The conditions applied are reasonably necessary to ensure the benefit of these medicines outweighs the risks. The conditions allow the risk to be managed while more information is obtained, and allow the sponsor to market the medicine while protecting the safety of the public. The alternative would be to deny approval, which would be an unjustifiable diminishing of liberties when the risk can be adequately managed through conditions.

Taking of property: 9(c)

Legislation should not take or severely impair, or authorise the taking or severe impairment of, property without the consent of the owner unless-

- there is a good justification for the taking or severe impairment; and
- fair compensation for the taking or severe impairment is provided to the owner; and
- the compensation is provided, to the extent practicable, by or on behalf of the persons who obtain the benefit of the taking or severe impairment
